The Honorable Robert Lamb
Assistant Secretary
Bureau of Diplomatic Security
United States Department of State
Washington, D.C. 20520

Dear Bob:

Thank you for your invitation to address the graduating class of special agents and to be present at their induction ceremony into the Diplomatic Security Service. Unfortunately, I will be tied up in Congressional testimony on February 26th and must decline. Please give my congratulations to the men and women that have passed your rigorous course. They serve as first line of security in protecting US diplomats and installations overseas. We could not carry out our work without them.

Best regards.

Sincerely yours,

/s/ William H. Webster

REMARKS

Bill:

The Director has testimony on the morning of 2/26 at 10:00 a.m. before the SSCI re statutory IG. He also has testimony on Thursday morning, 2/25 and Wednesday morning 2/24. A hectic week for testimony and also two days out for the off-site conference. You might want to point this out to Mr. Lamb and offer a possible raincheck.

Judge:

For your info, you will be testifying on the morning of the 26th before the SSCI re Statutory IG. Also, you are scheduled to testify the day before on the Budget, and on Wednesday and the offsite conference is set for Monday and Tuesday. You have a lot on your plate for this week already and to add one more might be heavy.

JUDGE:

RE: Speaking Invitation
 Diplomatic Security Service
 Department of State
 Washington, D.C.
 Friday, 26 February 1988

The Assistant Secretary for Diplomatic Security of State Department, Robert E. Lamb, has invited you to speak at the graduation and induction ceremony of their special agents program. The ceremony takes place at State Department on Friday, 26 February at 12:00 noon. The suggested format of your address is 10-15 minutes of remarks on a topic of your choice. You can expect an audience of 48 graduates and 300-400 friends, relatives, and colleagues. The media will not be present.

The Diplomatic Security Service, created in 1985, resulted from the efforts of Admiral Inman and the Advisory Panel on Overseas Security that he chaired. According to Secretary Lamb, the DSS has grown in the past two years more than any organization in the history of the Department. Thirty-six classes have graduated from the special agents training program. The program is selective with approximately 7 out of every 100 applicants hired who apply for the special agent program. An additional 5 percent fail the rigorous 5-month basic officer course.

The mission of the DSS is to provide a secure environment for the conduct of American diplomacy and the promotion of American interests worldwide. In addition, the special agents are responsible for developing and implementing physical, technical, and operational procedures necessary to protect our facilities, personnel, and national security information. Previous speakers have been Secretary George Schultz, Congressman Daniel Mica (D, FL), Ambassador Vernon Walters, and Commandant of the Marine Corps General A. M. Gray.

I recommend that you speak to this group, and Chief of our Counterintelligence Staff [redacted] concurs. If you agree, attached is a letter of acceptance for your signature.

Dear Mr. Lamb:

Thank you for your invitation to address the graduating class of special agents and to be present at their induction ceremony into the Diplomatic Security Service (DSS). I look forward to speaking to this fine group of men and women, and I congratulate you for having such an active training program for your special agents. A member of my Public Affairs staff will be in touch with you concerning any arrangements.

Best regards.

Dear Judge Webster:

The Diplomatic Security Service was created in 1985 as a result of the work of Admiral Inman and the Advisory Panel on Overseas Security he chaired. In the intervening two years the Diplomatic Security Service (DSS) has seen more rapid growth than any organization in the history of the Department.

Throughout this growth DSS has maintained high standards for its special agents. After strict initial screening we ultimately hire only about 7 out of every 100 applicants to the special agent program. An additional 5 percent fails to complete successfully the rigorous 5-month basic officer course. To those who do, it is a proud occasion.

We mark their completion of this program and their formal induction into the Diplomatic Security Service with a graduation ceremony on the Department's Eighth Floor. These are important events for our Service. About 300-400 friends, relatives and colleagues of the graduates normally attend.

On February 26, at 12:00 noon in the Department's Benjamin Franklin Room we shall graduate 48 of these men and women. On behalf of the class, I would like to extend an invitation for you to be the graduation speaker and the guest of honor at this ceremony. Previous speakers

The Honorable
William H. Webster,
The Director of Central Intelligence.
